Connecticut Transportation Updates

Transit Roundtable in Hamden

CACT, Transit for Connecticut, AARP, GNHTD and SCRCOG sponsored the latest Transit Roundtable: Successes, Challenges and Your Community on Tuesday, November 18 at Greater New Haven Transit District. The audience was welcomed by Mayor Jackson who noted it's important to "try to create the right connections". Donna Carter (GNHTD) noted their service was complimentary to CTTransit New Haven, noting the ridership demographics have changed. GNHTD recently started a 501 (c)3 to "help seniors and people with disabilities continue to ride with GNHTD." They kicked off the new initiative with an "Every 40 cents makes a difference!" campaign. Jonathan Rubell (The Kennedy Center) said they are providing more travel training to help people use the best transit options for them. Some issues he noted are lack of sidewalks and the timing of transit. The Kennedy Center is also looking into volunteer driver programs for the Greater New Haven area. "Our challenge is with timing issues for medical appointments and procedures", said Paul Doyle (Estuary Council of Seniors Inc). He works mostly with people with serious illnesses, utilizing a host of volunteers and 2 paid drivers. Carl Amento noted the most shocking statistic is "jobs sprawl". Only 27% of New Haven residents utilize public transportation to get to work with an average 90 minute commute. "Buses need to improve their images" said Carl. Tony Rescigno (Greater New Haven Chamber of Commerce) represents 15 communities with 2500 businesses and would like to see more parking at Union Station and increased flights from Tweed Airport because the New Haven to New York corridor provides opportunities for businesses looking to grow in New Haven. Joe Carbone (The Workplace) said he lives near Tweed Airport and would like to see more flights from there since it's so convenient. Joe noted that more than 40% of jobs are part time and resources should be spent on public transportation. Mike Sanders (CONNDOT) said "we all need to become mobility managers...transportation is mobility, transportation is access." Buses are a key to getting people to jobs, etc., and not "rolling urinals". Mike is working on new technologies such as smart cards, etc. He noted that where new service has been added in the last 5 years, it's been successful. Following the panel's comments there was a question/answer period.

Governor's Rescissions

OPM announced $54.6 million in rescissions from state agencies recently. Of significance is the $126,433 TEIP funds cut from the DSS budget. CACT is working with various statewide groups to have these funds restored.

New CEO at Norwalk Transit

Kim Morton, Director of Fiscal and Administrative Services for Greater Hartford Transit District was selected from a national search as the Norwalk Transit District CEO. Kim will replace long time Administrator Lou Schulman.

Lou Schulman Retiring

On November 19, a retirement party was held for longtime Norwalk Transit District Administrator Lou Schulman. Lou’s accomplishments were lauded by mayors, elected officials, transit agencies and his wife and daughter, along with some very funny stories. Lou is a former CACT Chair and member of the Legislative Committee. His encyclopedic understanding of transit is legendary, along with his total devotion to providing the best service for his riders. Many thanks Lou for all you’ve done to advance public transportation in Connecticut.

Congratulations to NTD
